

TRANSFORMA

Is a Colombian-based think tank that advances climate action and wider ecological transitions, as fundamental elements in the pursuit of sustainable and regenerative societies and economies at the national, regional, and global levels.

At Transforma, we promote climate action and ecological transitions. We highlight socio-economic, environmental, and climate action problems and initiatives. We have a multidisciplinary and multidimensional approach where we mix expertise and passion with the conviction of generating changes in the way we inhabit our planet.

MISSION

We develop science and evidence-based analysis and tools to support different stakeholders in decision-making processes that catalyze changes aligned with a sustainable and regenerative future.

VISION

We envision a different way to inhabit our planet in which all life thrives on the basis of equity and resilience.

OUR HISTORY

In 2017, Andrea Guerrero, Isabel Cavelier, and Maria Laura Rojas created an organization in which they could work on projects about the subjects they feel passionate about and in which they had experience, besides supporting ideas of other professionals from different fields. This is how Transforma came to be, an organization dedicated, through a multidisciplinary approach, to approach the complexity of the climate crisis in Colombia and the region.

OUR PROGRAMMES

CLIMATE TRANSITIONS

The Climate Transitions program addresses systemic changes required to cut greenhouse gas emissions and substantially increase the resilience of the economy and society while fostering equity and leaving no one behind.

ECOLOGICAL TRANSITIONS

The Ecological Transitions program addresses the need for radical restoration of nature and our relationship with it and as a part of it, unfolding the social and economic transitions required to support sustainable and resilient livelihoods in thriving ecosystems.
